

Daughter (?)

Mother (biological) has the baby and mother (adoptive) is given the baby

Mother (biological) is 15 and mother (adoptive) is 33

Mother (biological) is Black and mother (adoptive) is white

Mother (biological) is poor and mother (adoptive) is middle-class

Mother (biological) lives above a strip club and mother (adoptive) lives in a suburban cul-de-sac

Mother (biological) has paranoia and schizophrenia and mother (adoptive) has never come close to mentally ill criteria

Mother (biological) takes medication to not hallucinate, while mother (adoptive) has never experienced voices or imaginary people to alleviate

Mother (biological) works 12 hours in a cancerous pitch black mine, while mother (adoptive) works at an office only worrying about a sore spine

Mother (biological) recovers from a coke addiction and mother (adoptive) likes to paint those addicted with an awful depiction

Mother (biological) almost loses son from having horrible living conditions while mother (adoptive) almost loses her kids by threatening them until they succumb to utter submission

How come daughter becomes the belonging of mother (adoptive) because she has money?

How come the government would rather sell daughter (property) than to give mother (biological) support to raise her?

How come mother (adoptive) - stranger - becomes guardian before mother's (biological) family members do?

Mother (adoptive) tells daughter that she should be grateful (property) that she didn't end up on the streets because of her (buyer)

Daughter wants to know where her family is (biological)

Daughter is an outsider in her family (adoptive)

Daughter feels lost

Mother (biological) and daughter were never supposed to meet, but they found one another

Mother (biological) and daughter feel lost when they see each other

Mother (biological) and daughter were always supposed to need the other

Mother and daughter were never supposed to have (left)

each other